HUMBERTO CANALE CABERNET FRANC

14% Vol. £45.00

A 100% Cabernet Franc wine from Rio Negro in Patagonia, the dry growing season with hot days and cold nights helps to produce a wine with wonderful ripe and generous fruit. The yield is kept extremely low to obtain maximum concentration of fruit and the wine is oak barrel fermented and totally unfiltered.

HUMBERTO CANALE PINOT NOIR RESERVA

14% Vol. £45.00

The Canale family vineyard is situated in Rio Negro, Patagonia and is one of the most southerly in the world. This 100% Pinot Noir is a mature wine, intense and elegant, rich in taste and flavour with complex, fruity and spicy aromas. In the mouth it is medium-bodied, velvety and smooth, with flavours of vanilla, tobacco and walnuts.

UNANIME

14.5% Vol £46.00

Made with 60% Cabernet Sauvignon, 25% Malbec & 15% Cabernet Franc grapes, all from the Uco Valley in Mendoza, this wine won a global award in 2012 and it's easy to see why. Deep cherry-red in colour, it has aromas of tobacco, chocolate and a touch of black pepper.

LAS MORAS GRAN SHIRAZ 3 VALLEYS

14.5% Vol. £46.00

From San Juan de Cuyo, this is a blend of hand-picked 100% Syrah grapes from 3 valleys – at 2132 feet, 3116 feet and 4429 feet. Deep red/purple in colour with notes of red fruit and chocolate and a full bodied finish. Eighteen months in French oak add complexity and style to this superb blend.

ARGENTINIAN WINE

A decade or so ago you would have been hard pressed to find anyone in Britain who had tried wine from Argentina, or even knew that they made wine there. In fact, Argentina produces more wine than any other country in South America, and is the fifth largest wine producer in the world. But Argentina doesn't only produce a high volume of wine: the quality and diversity, as you might expect in as large a country with such a varied climate, is unrivalled – not something that can always be said about other so-called New World wine producers.

Argentina's most popular red grape variety, and the one that perhaps defines the country's wine, is the dark, intense yet fruity Malbec, but you'll also find Pinot Noir, Tannat and Cabernet Sauvignon, and blends that include Syrah, Merlot and Tempranillo. White grape varieties include Viognier, Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc and the indigenous Argentinian Torrentes.

The biggest and most significant wine-producing region is in the province of Mendoza, where around two-thirds of all Argentinian wine is produced, and where the relatively benign and stable temperatures are ideal for growing grapes and making wine. The main wine-producing areas of Mendoza are Maipu and Lujan, where vineyards at between 2500 and 3500 feet produce some of the country's finest single-growth old Malbecs, while the even higher Valle de Uco produces some excellent white wines, including some the country's most impressive Chardonnays.

There are two other main wine-growing regions besides Mendoza. Way further south, the more extreme climate of the Patagonia region provides a home to both white wines and also reds, made from Malbec and Pinot Noir grapes, which are slightly lighter than their counterparts in the rest of the country, while in the extreme north of the country, the high, hot region of Salta has some of the country's oldest vineyards, planted by Spanish missionaries in the 16th century. These grow Malbec and Tannat grapes that produce hefty, full-bodied red wines with high alcohol levels.
